PREFACE

This study was undertaken with the hope of establishing, on a foundation something more than personal opinion, the facts as to the Latin element in Shakespeare and the Bible. Many unwarranted statements, often little more seemingly than guesses, are current and receive recognition, because they are found in scholarly works. As an indication of this a few of the statements are quoted:

"Use and time have made the forms of expression used in the translation of the Bible familiar, and they have never ceased to exercise a deep influence on English thought, writing, and speech. The large proportion of words of Anglo-Saxon origin used by the translators is noticeable. The first thirty-five words of the Lord's Prayer are all Old English words, and on the average through the whole Bible ninety out of every hundred words are Anglo-Saxon; while Shakespeare uses only eighty-five Anglo-Saxon words out of every hundred."—Edward P. Cheyney, A Short History of England, p. 391; New York, Longmans, Green and Company, Revised Edition (1919).

"If our Bible were not written chiefly in Old English words, about 90%, it would not be so strong and direct as it is, but if it were wholly Old English, it would lack much of its sonorous beauty."—Walter S. Hinchman, History of English Literature, p. 7; New York, The Century Company (1915).

"Shakespeare's Plays show 40% of Romance or Latin words, which is probably a larger proportion than is heard from those who speak their mother tongue with spontaneous idiomatic correctness."—Richard Grant White, Life and Genius of Shakespeare, p. 216; quoted by Ignatius Donnelly, The Great Cryptogram (1888), p. 15.

"Anglo-Saxon should be studied not only because it is the foundation of the language in which Shakespeare wrote, but also for its own intrinsic merits."—Reuben Post Halleck, History of English Literature, p. 43; Old Edition (1900), American Book Company.

"The King James translation of the Bible was made for the less educated classes, and based as it was on earlier English versions often fails to employ the words of classical origin, or even avoids them: the educated classes knew Latin and used the Bible in that language. This translation, therefore, contains fewer classical words than do the plays of Shakespeare."—Roland G. Kent, Language and Philology, p. 53; Boston, Marshall Jones Company (1923).

"The classical words in Shakespeare appear to form approximately two-thirds of his vocabulary and one-fifth of all words used."—Roland G. Kent, Language and Philology, p. 52; Boston, Marshall Jones Company (1923).

"Although Shakespeare was no pedant, the modern reader who is not familiar with Latin is at a disadvantage in the minute interpretation of his text."—Shakespeare's England, Vol. II, p. 565; Oxford, Clarendon Press (1917).

These impressions and statements and others like them have become so fixed in the minds of speakers and writers that there is need for an exhaustive study to correct or corroborate them.

Another but secondary aim of this study is to make available for future research-students data showing the component elements of the vocabulary of Shakespeare and the Bible.

The sources underlying the study are standard and recognized pieces of scholarship: Alexander Cruden's Concordance of the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, Griffin and Company, London, 1834; Mary Cowden Clarke's Complete Concordance to Shakespeare, Bickers and Son, London, 1889; Gonzalez Lodge's Vocabulary of High School Latin, Columbia University, New York, 2nd Edition, 1909; James A. H. Murray's A New English Dictionary, completed through T-Th, Oxford, at the Clarendon Press, 1888-1919; The Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count, made under the supervision of Edward L. Thorndike in connection with the Classical Survey conducted during the years 1921-23 by the Investigating Committee of the American Classical League, financed by the General Education Board of New York City; Shakespeare's Works, edited with a scrupulous revising of the text by Mary Cowden Clarke, F. B. Felt and Company, 455 Broome Street, New York, 1871; and Shakespeare-Lexicon, A Complete Dictionary of all the English words, phrases, and constructions in the works of the poet by Alexander Schmidt, LL.D., Third Edition Revised and Enlarged by Gregor Sarrazin, Berlin, 1902, Published by Georg Reimer.

During the preparation of data in 1920-24 it was found necessary to supplement these sources by use of the Century Dictionary, prepared under the superintendence of William Dwight Whitney and Benjamin E. Smith; New York, The Century Company, 1889-1910, since the New English Dictionary was complete at the beginning only through the alphabet to T-Th. But after this dictionary was completed in April, 1928, it was consulted during the three proof-readings of the data during 1924-1929.

Occasional reference was made to the following works: George Lillie Craik, The English of Shakespeare, London, 1857; E. Ekwall, Shakespeare's Vocabulary; Its Etymological Elements, Upsala, 1903; Onions, A Shakespeare Glossary, 2nd edition, London, 1919; Richard J. Cunliffe, New Shakespeare Dictionary, New York, Scribner's, 1910; J. Bartlett, Concordance to Shakespeare, New York, Macmillan Company, 1927; A. W. Pollard, The Holy Bible, Facsimile of the 1611 King James Version, Oxford University Press, 1911; W. A. Wright, The Bible Word-Book, 2nd edition, London, 1884; Robert Young, Analytical Concordance to the Bible, [no date or place of original edition], 20th American edition, revised by William B. Stevenson, and a sketch of recent exploration in Bible lands by Thomas Nicol, revised to date by G. W. Gilmore,

New York, Funk and Wagnalls Co., 1924; James Strong, Exhaustive Concordance, New York, Methodist Book Concern, 1894, Reprint of 1926.

The method of study was as follows:

(1) To record the derivation, number of occurrences, and the first occurrence of all words in the Bible.

(2) To record the derivation, number of occurrences, and the first occurrence of all words in Shakespeare.

(3) To compare the words of Latin origin with the Vocabulary of High School Latin by Gonzalez Lodge.

(4) To compare all words with The Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count and record the source credit.

(5) To record the ultimate origin of all words according to the derivation given in A New English Dictionary by James A. H. Murray.

The specific purpose of the study briefly stated is (1) to ascertain what proportion of the basic vocabulary of the Bible is of Latin origin; and (2) to ascertain what proportion of the basic vocabulary of Shakespeare is of Latin origin.

Volume I gives the collected data showing the words of the King James Version in alphabetical order, with their first occurrence in the Bible, number of occurrences, derivations, first occurrence in Shakespeare and number of occurrences, the Thorndike source credit, and, if of Latin derivation, the sources for their study as found in Lodge's Vocabulary of High School Latin.

Volume II gives the collected data showing the words of Shakespeare which are not found in the Bible, arranged in alphabetical order, giving the same information as recorded for the words in Volume I.

Mrs. Cowden Clarke omits from her Concordance to Shakespeare certain words which as she says in her preface, page X, would have occupied enormous space without corresponding value. She omits auxiliary verbs, titles, conjunctions, adverbs, and a large number of other words, which she justifies by saying their omission is due to "their insignificance and frequent occurrence." These addenda are put at the end of Volume II. These new words are not included in the statistical counts, but would not appreciably alter any conclusions, as even a hasty glance at them will show.

The purpose of this work has been to determine the amount of Latin in Shakespeare and in the English Bible, but this has involved the larger task of recording all the language elements in the vocabulary of these two bodies of writings. One serious difficulty was to distinguish between Anglo-Saxon and Middle English. The difficulty of assigning a word to one or the other depends upon when the word entered the English language.

A compound word when formed from two or more different language sources (hybrid) is given a special place in the tables under the heading "Hybrids," but those compounds formed in the more usual way from two or more words or phrases of the same language are not separately listed.

Shakespeare (Ant. and Cleop. ii. 2) says: "Most poor matters point to rich ends." May this humble labor tend to the "rich end" of furthering a universal study of the vocabularies of Shakespeare and the Bible and a more accurate understanding of the great contribution of the Latin language to the other languages of the world, especially to our own great English tongue.

The author desires to express her grateful appreciation to Mrs. Charles E. Little for the use of her copy of Alexander Cruden's Concordance to the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, a very valuable book, the property of her late father, the Rev. Ferdinand Jacobs, who was a careful, accurate scholar and preacher; to the late Dr. Mason D. Gray, Rochester, New York, for permission to use the data before publication of The Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count; to the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation for two fellowships which made it financially possible for the author to devote time to research; to President Henry J. Willingham, State Normal School, Florence, Alabama, for a two years' leave of absence from teaching duties; to President Bruce R. Payne and the Faculty of George Peabody College for Teachers for instruction and inspiration; and most especially to Dr. Charles E. Little, of Peabody, for his patient advice and scholarly criticism.

In such a vast study, in hundreds of pages of printed citations, an occasional error is bound to creep in. Every effort has been made to keep out such errors and to give an accurate tabulation of data. The Author, therefore, acknowledges her obligations to her brothers in labor, the Printers; for though the public can judge of the typographical beauty of the pages of the volumes, no one but herself can appreciate the printers' care and minute correctness. The Author would be grateful for information concerning any errors which readers may discover.

EXPLANATION OF ABBREVIATIONS AND CAPTIONS

The abbreviations used other than those in the above list will ordinarily be understood from their use in modern and current dictionaries, but the following explanations are necessary:

1. In Shakespeare the Roman numerals refer to the act, the Arabic figures to the scene; thus the word "abandon" will be found in As You Like It, act five, scene one.

2. In the Latin citations given under the caption "Lodge," which means Lodge's Vocabulary of High School Latin, the Roman numerals refer to the book of the author and the Arabic figures to the chapter and section; thus Caes. I. 25.3 means book one of Caesar, De Bello Gallico, chapter twenty-five, section three.

3. In the English citations under the captions "Thorndike and Source Credit," Thorndike means the Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count, and Source Credit means the valuation given in this word count; thus "abandon" Source Credit 9 means a source credit of 9 in the Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count.

The letter "T" means that the word occurs in the commonest 500 words in Thorndike's Teacher's Word Book, which gives a source credit of 10 in the Thorndike-Grinstead Word Count.

4. "No. of Occ." means number of occurrences.

5. In the Bible the Arabic figures refer to the chapter and the verse of the chapter; thus "abase—Job 40.11."

6. The caption "Derivation" means the ultimate origin of the word; thus "aired—Gk. aer" means that the word aired has for its ultimate origin the Greek word aer.

The use of all words as they occurred in the sentences quoted has been the guide for their etymological treatment in all instances where there were several words spelled alike but of different meaning.
